Wright announced a record amount of misdemeanor charges against people allegedly responsible for mislabeling marijuana at a farm in Yadkinville, North Carolina. The charges are the result of a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration investigation, Operation Anvil, that was launched in 2012. Assistant Attorney General Tompkins stated, "Operation Anvil is an integral part of our continuing effort to enforce the Controlled Substances Act against individuals and groups who corrupt the drug supply chain and threaten the health and safety of our children. This is a tremendous success in our efforts to stop the spread of mislabeled marijuana and other narcotics as products of the drug trade. This is a major victory in our fight against trafficking in the unlawful supply of prescription drugs and, in particular, in this case, of mislabeled, contaminated marijuana." The indictment alleges that more than 45,000 marijuana plants were grown at the Yadkinville property, with names such as "Sebastian's Magical Momma," "Santiago's Heritage F1F2," and "Cadillac's A 82138339de
